Dear [REDACTED]

That's really good news! Yes, I can certainly make the Wednesday time slots – I'm thinking you mean 10th Feb, but I can also do 3rd Feb. Would it be just myself, or would it be useful for my colleague [REDACTED] to be part of the Teams meeting as well? He brings excellent grassroots knowledge to our work.

I look forward to hearing back,
Warm wishes

Sorry for a slight delay between messages.

The email below was really helpful, and I have used it in discussion with colleagues and the [REDACTED]

It looks like we are now in a position to continue discussions with organisations that have expressed an interest in CLLD funding and are going to start with projects that have match in place. The aim being to get projects up and running quickly to support local people.

The next step would be for you or a member of your team to 'meet the [REDACTED]' this would be in the form of a Teams meeting and you would be asked to answer some set questions (provided in advance) and then have the opportunity for any follow up questions to be asked. At this point the [REDACTED] would then decide if they wanted to invite projects to full application.

If you are still interested can you pencil in next Wednesday morning for this meeting? The meeting runs 9.30-11 so we could be flexible within that timescale if it helped? I will be able to confirm if this is possible and the questions on Wednesday morning.

Don't worry if this don't work for you, we can look at an alternative time it just seemed sensible to use this pre-arranged meeting if at all possible.

Let me know

Dear [REDACTED]

Thank you for such a quick reply, but yes, potentially disappointing news...

I appreciate that not all charities are able to pivot their services to virtual, although many have done so and of course the need in the current pandemic is greater than ever; we have certainly successfully navigated this “pivot” (for the second time now) and have placed ex-offender candidates into paid work during the 2nd lockdown, and again during this new 3rd one – I had [REDACTED] starters in jobs last week... I think the nature of the roles that a lot of our men and women are going for, seem “luckily” to fall into those essential categories (manufacturing/production/driving and logistics/care work etc) which are still needing to hire – even in some cases to compensate for their own poorly staff, as well as for an increased demand in some sectors. (I have certainly kept my takeaway driver busy, ahem).

Just in the event that there is scope in your discussions with the [REDACTED] to still pursue this opportunity for the ESF money to come into our target geographies, we continue to be extremely keen to apply. Since our last chat, we have secured additional funding (from [REDACTED]) that would also go towards the match, and [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

Essentially, we are geared up to continue services and have the match in place!

Thank you for your time [REDACTED],
Best wishes

Happy New Year - and unfortunately this new iteration (which is very different to when we spoke less than a month ago) is probably going to lead to a delay in us opening the call for funding. We have a meeting later this week and I am going to report back to the [REDACTED] on the potential projects and we should have a clearer idea after this.

Sorry it's not better news

Thanks

Happy New Year [REDACTED], in this latest iteration of new normal...!

Just wondering if you have an idea yet of when this funding round will open for application?

Many thanks
